

NEWSWORTHY TRENDS

What Women Really Want

(NAPSA)—Money may not cure the blues, but plenty of people get a little green when it comes to dollars and cents.

Twenty-six percent of women answered “wealth” when a recent survey asked about the possession they envy most. But money aside, what makes women truly envious?

Just 3 percent of women look for a man who is a “big spender.”

Almost two-thirds (71 percent) have some level of “body envy,” coveting another woman’s small waist or great tan. That’s according to a survey of American women, ages 21 to 54, by Midori, the green liqueur. Some other results:

- Oprah Winfrey leads the most enviable lifestyle, followed by Angelina Jolie. Hillary Clinton came in fourth, beating Paris Hilton, who tallied just 1 percent.

- To make themselves more enviable, 35 percent would lose weight, 21 percent want a new wardrobe, and 15 percent, a makeover.

- Hey, Mr. Big Stuff, put away that platinum card. Forty-three percent of women appreciate men with a “great sense of humor,” while just 3 percent go for the big spender.

To find out more results and get some great drink recipes, visit www.MidoriUSA.com.