Young Millionaire Shares Rich Story

(NAPSA)—A remarkable youth who went from public assistance to a million-dollar net worth before turning 20 is the focus of a new book.

In it, he shares his extraordinary story and offers what he considers to be the nine key principles behind his success, providing a step-by-step primer for others to follow.

Farrah Gray sold his first business at the age of 14 for more than a million dollars. According to People magazine, he is the only African-American teenager to rise from public assistance to a business mogul without being in entertainment or having a family connection.

The book, "Reallionaire: Nine Steps to Becoming Rich from the Inside Out" (HCI Books, $12.95), reveals a fascinating track record. Prompted by his mother's grave illness at the tender age of 6, Farrah spent his first hard-earned $50 for a family luxury (a sit-down dinner). At the age of 8, he founded his first business club. By 14, the rest is history.

In addition to business ventures, he has created a foundation for entrepreneurs under the age of 25.

The book was coauthored by Fran Harris, a former WNBA champion and ESPN commentator.

The book is available online at www.hci-online.com or by calling 800-441-5569. It is also in local bookstores.
