

Career Opportunities

Health Care Field Continues Its Healthy Glow Of Job Growth

(NAPSA)—In an ailing job market, one type of occupation looks healthier than many others: the health care industry.

Of Yahoo.com's eight fastest-growing job markets, health care jobs rate No. 1. The health care occupations included on this list are registered nurses, health aides, and nursing and physical therapists.

These jobs are found in private agencies, residential care facilities, family services and private households.

Careerbuilder.com lists several health care occupations on its top 30 hottest jobs. The top health care jobs include personal and home care aides, home health aides, medical assistants, substance abuse counselors, physical therapy assistants, pharmacy assistants, mental health counselors, physical therapists and physician assistants.

Finding this type of job is easier than you might imagine, as some agencies specialize in the health care field.

For example, Interim HealthCare provides a variety of work opportunities in many different types of facilities. The nation's oldest leading home care and medical staffing company has 300 locations nationwide.

It provides a broad array of home care services including se-

Occupation	% changes
Personal and health care aides	50.6
Home health aides	48.7
Medical assistants	35.4
Physician assistants	27.0
Nurses	23.0

Source: Bureau of Labor Statistics

Of the dozen fastest-growing occupations, five of them represent the health care field.

nior care and pediatric nursing; IV therapy; and physical, occupational and speech therapy.

In an effort to support job seekers, it offers a menu of tools and resources to assist them with their educational and professional goals.

The company is also helpful in providing online continuing education, connecting job seekers with others in their field and providing state licensing information.

Interim HealthCare also offers a variety of opportunities in response to today's desire for work flexibility. Per-diem and blocked schedules are available through various facilities including schools and corporations.

For more information on finding a job in the health care field, visit www.interimhealthcare.com.