Making The Most Of Your Wedding Memories

(NAPSA)—When it comes to capturing once-in-a-lifetime wedding memories, more brides and grooms are saying “I do” to digital photography.

Research shows that the under $1,000 digital camera market will nearly double in the next five years. Consequently, more people are also investing in photo software to complement these cameras.

For example, easier-to-use consumer imaging software, such as PhotoSuite 5 by Roxio, sells for less than $50, making it easy and affordable to store and share precious memories. Over the past five years, Roxio has won more than 75 industry awards because the software is feature-rich and user-friendly. PhotoSuite 5 Platinum Edition makes it easier for even the most novice user to organize, enhance, create, share and burn photos.

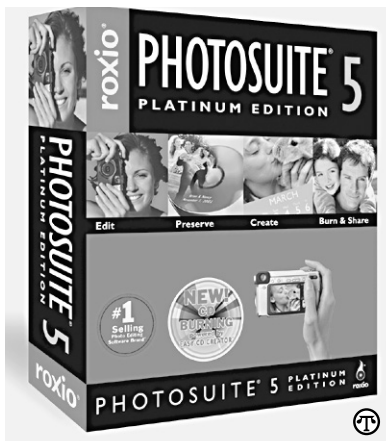

For example:

- Improve the quality of the image in one click. If your favorite wedding photo is off center, you can change the composition. If the bride and groom have red eye in that snapshot of slicing the cake, you can remove the red eye. If a picture is a little fuzzy, you can sharpen it.

- Create an electronic photo album online to share the wedding highlights with family and friends.

- Make the memories last a lifetime—you can easily burn the photos, slideshows, or collages onto CD or video CD to share or archive.

- Use the panoramic stitching

Some software for storing and organizing digital photos is so easy, you may not have to read the manual.

technology to take a wide angle photo of the whole wedding party, or beach shots from the honeymoon.

- Use the software before the wedding to make wedding shower or wedding invitations and after the wedding to make thank you cards.

Guests can take their favorite photos of the day and make the newlyweds a wedding calendar to be used during their honeymoon year.
