Software is available that can help teens have fun while they learn.

One such gift is StudyWorks!, an engaging array of interactive math and science software programs for middle and high school students. The technology and its supporting free Web site, www.studyworks.com, can help students tackle the often-feared subjects of math and science in unique and interesting ways.

The information helps middle and high school students adjust to the "language" of math and science, gain better understanding of the subjects, and prepare for exams and homework.
