Gifts For Grads For Givers On A Budget

(NAPSA)—With caps and gowns on the way and diplomas being printed, many proud parents and family members are left with a key question: How do you find an affordable yet memorable gift that the graduate in your life will really use and enjoy?

Given the current state of the economy, this may seem like even more of a challenge, but there are indeed a few bargains out there that will be cherished and valued by the recipient.

For example, a new smartphone can be a terrific solution for your gift-giving budget and a welcome tool for your recent grad. The Palm Centro, for instance, is one of the most affordable and feature-packed phones available—and is an investment in the new grad's future that you can feel good about.

College and high-school graduates are about to begin a new chapter in their lives, and they need plenty of help to stay organized. This handy phone can help keep grads focused, with a built-in organizer for names, numbers, appointments, notes and to-do's. It provides features that young adults thrive on, such as e-mail, texting and picture mail, while also allowing the user to tackle academic and workplace tasks, such as editing papers or drafting a report.

In addition, there are thousands of useful applications that users can download for their Centro. Here are four top applications for any grad (available at Palm's software store, software.palm.com):

- HoliDates—Essential for planning trips back home or keeping track of well-deserved vacation days.
- Oxford American Dictionary and Thesaurus for Palm OS—Indispensable for any stressed grad or new employee.
- Diet & Exercise Assistant—Keep them healthy and happy.
- Advanced Brain Trainer—Keep their minds sharp.

New grads are heading out into the big wide world. A thoughtful and affordable gift such as a Centro phone can give them a good start, and help them stay connected with the people most important to them along the way.
