

GIFT GIVING IDEAS

The "It" List Of Holiday Electronic Gifts

Electronics can make terrific gifts for just about everybody on your list.

(NAPSA)—Choosing the right gifts for everybody on your holiday shopping list isn't always easy. Not only is cool technology making life easier, but it's making gift giving simpler too. That's because the latest electronics, complete with all the bells and whistles, are sure to leave recipients oohing and aahing long after the wrapping paper has been recycled.

Here are a few gift-giving suggestions:

For the Office Geek: The CW-75 disc title printer lets users professionally title their CD-Rs and DVDs with crisp, clear thermal printing, without the hassle of applying labels. It prints up to 16 lines and features a keyboard for stand-alone operation and USB connection.

For the Adventurer: The Casio Pathfinder PAG70 watch can be great for the avid skier, as it features tough solar power and low temperature resistance, a digital compass, an altimeter, a barometer, thermometer, stopwatch, countdown timer and 50 meter water resistance. The extreme sports enthusiast will likely flip for the G-Shock GW200 watch, which features a dive timer and a vital stats databank where you can input your blood type, emergency contact number and other vital statistics that can be helpful in life-threatening emergencies.

For the Traveler: The pocket-sized Exilim EX-S500—available in orange, white and gray—is a five megapixel digital camera that—at only half-an-inch thick—is the size of a credit card. It can take MPEG4 movies for up to one hour, and allows the user to shoot and edit his/her own instant video in a highly portable and sleek design with “33 best shot modes” with anti-shake and anti-blur capability.

For the Entertainer: Adults and children will love to let go of their inhibitions and get really creative as they entertain guests on a full-sized keyboard with sing-along function where you learn as you go with keys that light up as you play. The LK-94TV features 61 keys, a 100-song tune bank, 264 tones and a TV connection that allows for lesson display and karaoke on any TV.

For the Teen Vogue Diva: A clear, square-faced Baby-G (BG184) watch will not only accessorize with everything in her hip wardrobe, but it'll minimize decision making, so she'll be on time to all her social functions.
