Tee off At Midnight

(NAPSA)—If your tee time is midnight, you may just be golfing in Iceland. That's what happens at The Amstel Light Iceland Open, a golfing adventure in Reykjavik, Iceland on June 22-27, 2004.

An amateur golf tournament, open to the public, it takes advantage of round-the-clock daylight in Iceland during the Summer Solstice. The tournament features tee times at midnight and includes a 36-hole tournament and two practice rounds, played on two of Iceland's finest golf courses, The Reykjavik Golf Club and The Keilir Golf Club.

Much more than an amateur golf outing, the Open offers a dream vacation—fun, relaxation, sport and adventure. In addition to a 36-hole tournament, players can take in white water rafting, snowmobiling, soaking in mineral hot springs or dining on the world-renowned cuisine.

The tournament also features a sweepstakes, so consumers across the country can participate in this event. Two grand prize winners get a trip to the 2004 Amstel Light Iceland Open for six days and five nights for themselves and a guest.
