Kitchenware For Today's Newlyweds

(NAPSA)—Some wedding traditions come and go, but the gift registry continues to be a primary concern for brides and grooms as well as family members and guests. The possibilities for gift giving are endless, and kitchen housewares continue to be among the most popular bridal gifts. They can be practical yet decorative, functional yet stylish.

“Couples just starting out together need these everyday items,” according to Meg Tipton, marketing manager, DeLonghi America. “And they’re also looking for the ‘latest and greatest’ innovations for their new home.”

With the many kitchen housewares on store shelves, manufacturers have gone above and beyond the “traditional” offerings to provide feature-filled kitchenware with “real-life” innovations.

DeLonghi, for example, recently introduced a deep fryer that, by design, cooks lighter and crispier fried foods. Friends and family of the newlyweds can now bestow a deep fryer upon the happy couple without guilt because the RotoFryer from DeLonghi helps users prepare lighter deep fried food.

Featuring a patented tilted rotating basket, this sleek and compact countertop fryer uses only half the oil of conventional deep fryers and delivers delectable results for fried food fanatics. Food is placed in the basket with oil, and then the basket automatically rotates the food in and out.

After the food is prepared, oil is drained through an attached tube and a strainer removes any unwanted food particles. The filtered oil is collected in the included container and can be recycled for next time. This drainage system is exclusive to the RotoFryer and eliminates the hassle traditionally associated with fryer clean-up! The digital timer, adjustable thermostat, and viewing window are just a few of the additional convenience features.

“We’ve again given consumers something that they never thought possible,” claims Tipton, “an easier way to enjoy deep fried cooking that’s lighter than ever.”

The RotoFryer is available at home, housewares and department stores nationwide. For retail locations, call 800-322-3848 or visit the Web site at www.delonghiusa.com and discover other kitchen innovations from DeLonghi.
