

MANAGING YOUR MONEY

Save For The Future Making Everyday Purchases

(NAPSA)—A new credit card lets cardmembers earn cash rewards that can be automatically invested in a mutual fund.

The card, launched by Chase and Stockback, has a unique and flexible cash rewards program that enables cardmembers to save for the future as they shop. It offers all the benefits that come with a Chase Platinum card while allowing customers to earn cash rewards that can be automatically invested in a mutual fund. Currently, it is the only credit card that has this benefit.

How It Works

With the Stockback MasterCard from Chase, cardmembers earn 1 percent cash back on all purchases, and up to an additional 10 percent cash back on purchases made at participating Stockback merchants. Cardmembers can keep their rewards as cash, or they can have them automatically invested in a mutual fund. Cardholders can withdraw funds at any time and there is no limit on the amount of rewards a cardmember can accumulate by using the card.

Stockback has a network of over 85 online and offline merchants at which Stockback MasterCard from Chase cardmembers can earn up to

The next time you buy a book or fly to grandma, you may also be automatically investing in your mutual fund. A newly launched credit card lets you do that.

an additional 10 percent cash reward. These merchants include Hertz, Dell, CVS, Barnes & Noble, L.L. Bean, US Airways, Sunoco, Hallmark.com and The Sharper Image, among many others.

There is no annual fee for the card and it has an attractive introductory rate. In addition to the cash rewards, cardmembers receive all the benefits of carrying a Chase Platinum card, such as Travel Accident Insurance, Auto Rental Insurance coverage, purchase protection, a credit line up to $100,000, and more.

More information about the new card is available by visiting www.chase.com/cards.