Carry-On Made Easier

(NAPSA)—Doing a little homework before you travel could save you time at the airport.

For instance, visiting www.TSA.gov, the Transportation Security Administration's Web site, can help you learn what items can be packed in carry-on and which are best left in checked suitcases. You can also learn size requirements for toiletries that are allowed on planes and then find properly sized items in stores.

Air travelers can find toiletry items that are carry-on compatible.

For example, King Of Shaves AlphaOil Cooling comes in a ½-ounce container that's TSA compliant for carry-ons. The tiny bottle contains enough for up to 100 shaves. Plus, the product is made with nourishing ingredients such as aloe vera, tea tree oil, grape-seed oil and vitamin E, and it stays clear during the shave. This allows men to see where they are shaving and makes it easier to shape goatees and sideburns.

As a final tip, remember that all carry-on gels, liquids and aerosols need to be placed in a 1-quart, single zip-top, clear plastic bag. For more information and tips, visit www.shave.com.
