Better Nights, Better Mornings

(NAPSA)—An increasing number of older men are waking up rested, due to the impressive “side effect” of a surprising medicine. An ancient Chinese herbal formula increasingly used by men of all ages to improve sexual function has been found to also help reduce the frequency of urination in men.

Says one man who tried the medication, “I used to get up 10 or 12 times a night to urinate because of my prostate problem, but now it’s only two or three times.”

This can make for a better night’s sleep not to mention an increased ability to perform sexually in the morning. The man adds, “I hadn’t woken up in the morning with an erection for a couple of years. That happens regularly now.”

Pharmacists and physicians who have recommended the herbal formula, sold in the U.S. as BetterMAN, extol its benefits: “We have treated over 300 patients with BetterMAN,” reports Dr. Lawrence E. Dorman of the Applewood Medical Center, Independence, Missouri. “We have used

“A lot of people have been concerned with the problems associated with other products on the market,” adds Gary Kracoff, R.Ph., co-owner of the Health and Wellness Center at Johnson Drugs in Waltham, Massachusetts. He has more than 1,000 customers using the formula. “BetterMAN works, men and their spouses are telling us. What is so beneficial about BetterMAN is that it restores normal sexual activity without side effects. Many of my customers have found that they have seen not only an increase in sexual function but a dramatic decrease in nighttime urinary frequency.”
