

Women's Health

Easing Post-Labor Pain

(NAPSA)—The first few days after giving birth should be a time to experience the joy of motherhood. But for many women, this time is often spent coping with the lingering pain of delivery, caused by perineal tearing, stitches, bruises and other irritations.

Women now have a safe, natural option for easing the lingering pain of childbirth.

Fortunately, now there's a way to get natural relief for post-labor perineal pain. Femé Pads, developed by a midwife, provide localized relief that eases pain and swelling naturally while aiding in the healing process.

Each pad contains a specially formulated gel that is different from other injury gel or ice packs. Not only is the gel thicker to provide optimal cushiony comfort, its unique thermal properties allow the pad to stay colder longer. Plus, its distinctive shape is specially designed to conform to a woman's body.

Clinically tested and used in hospitals, Femé Pads can be ordered by calling Sea-Band International at 401-841-5900 or visiting www.sea-band.com.