

Father's Day Gift Ideas

Time Enough At Last: A Day Off For Dad

(NAPSA)—This Father's Day, it's possible to get Dad something he never seems to have enough of—time. Think about it: What father wouldn't love a week off from mowing the lawn? Or having someone else clean the gutters or repair the fence?

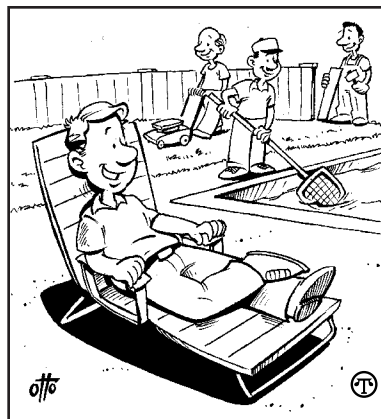

With just the click of a mouse, you can give Dad the perfect gift: a much-needed break. A new Web site provides real-time, online scheduling of home maintenance, repairs and improvement—turning day-to-day chores over to qualified service professionals.

This means Dad can have a pool service professional arrive right after the gardener and carpenter have left, so he can spend the day at the baseball stadium or having a picnic in the park.

The site, myHomeKey, provides access to more than 40,000 service professionals throughout the country from partners including Sears, GE, The Home Service Store, Carrier, HouseMaster, ServiceLane and SecurityVillage.com, as well as local service professionals. In addition, the site offers deals, such as rebates on home improvements, plumbing, repairs, handyman services and more with values of $25, $250 and $500 off.

As a special bonus for Dad, myHomeKey will give a free Weber Smokey Joe® Grill to all members who schedule a service by June 27, 2001.

"Every dad deserves a real day off and myHomeKey wants to help that happen," says Eric Zausner, president and chief executive officer of myHomeKey. "Fathers can enjoy spending time with their families and feel assured that their house is being taken care of by a network of service professionals who are rated, referred, insured and backed by a 100 percent satisfaction guarantee."

This year, why not give Dad the gift of time?

The site's most requested services are handyman services, AC tune-ups and maid service—three great ways to give Dad a break around the house. However, if you prefer a more traditional gift, myHomeKey also lets users shop for top-quality products online. Consumers can find more than 1,000 home-related products from brand names such as Black & Decker, Carrier, Culligan, Amana, Sharp and DeLonghi.

Whether you decide on a traditional gift or just giving Dad the day off, make it a Father's Day he remembers.

To find out more, visit the Web site at www.myhomekey.com.