Shades Of Green

(NAPSA)—Saving energy is in style these days and there are fashionable ways to go green at home while still saving some green for yourself. Here are hints on how:

- In the bath: Soft on the environment and to the touch, new, stylish hybrid linens that are a mix of organic cotton and other natural ingredients create silky, luxurious additions to any home.

Fashionably Green: Hybrid shutters combine the beauty of real wood with the strength and stability of modern materials.

- In the kitchen: Bring green luxury into your daily coffee regimen with the Presso, an ecofriendly and recyclable espresso maker by designer Patrick Hunt. It requires almost zero energy to produce premium-quality espresso.

- At the window: NewStyle[®] hybrid shutters, which are from Hunter Douglas, are not only stylish and reasonably priced but highly energy efficient, with the ability to resist cold air in the winter and solar heat in the summer.

The UltraGrain[™] finish makes them the only hybrid shutters to offer the attractive color and grain pattern of real stained wood.

Plus, the shutters are GREEN-GUARD Indoor Air Certified[®] and backed by a lifetime guarantee.
