

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

A New Kind Of Energy Investment

(NAPSA)—Few investments offer a guaranteed return. However, thanks to a new type of window, that's exactly what a growing number of homeowners are getting.

The window, which is said to enhance both the beauty and value of a property, comes with a pledge that a homeowner will save 49 percent on fuel consumption. The manufacturer also offers a transferable lifetime warranty and an optional glass breakage warranty.

Vinyl sashes and frames are said to make a new type of window virtually maintenance free.

Called the Quantum2, the windows feature foam-filled frames and sashes made of vinyl that tilt in. These features are said to make the windows maintenance free and easier to clean. Plus multiple weather seals around the sash help to make the window weather resistant.

The window meets the requirements of the federal government's Energy Star program and is offered with a glazing package that is said to block 99.5 percent of all UV rays.
