Windows Of The World

(NAPS)—It's becoming increasingly clear: the most popular window frame these days is vinyl.

Vinyl windows can be beautiful, comfortable and affordable.

For most of the 20th century, wood was the number one way to frame a window in America. Now, however, homeowners are discovering vinyl is a natural insulator, keeping the house comfortable and quiet, year-round. Unlike wood, vinyl requires little upkeep. Vinyl surfaces are easily cleaned with mild soap and water and never require staining, painting or sanding. Vinyl won't absorb water, which can cause a wood window to swell and stick.

What's more, vinyl does not conduct heat through itself as aluminum does and vinyl can be very affordable, report the experts at Quantum2, a leader in window technology, which offers a lifetime warranty on its window systems.
