Winning The Gift Game

Fortunately for gift givers, a number of items are on the market that can help active dads have a ball.

• Shave strokes off Dad's golf game. Help dad improve his handicap with a new device that can take the guesswork out of estimating distances on a golf course. The Yardage Pro™ Tour uses a laser rangefinder to provide accurate measurements and offers easy target acquisition anywhere from 10 to 700 yards away. The lightweight device, used by over 600 golfing professionals, is small enough to fit in dad's pocket, but can help make a big difference in his golf game.

• The eyes have it. If dad is an outdoor enthusiast, sunglasses can be a great gift to help protect his vision and keep him looking his best. Turbulence sunglasses by Bollé® feature lightweight, durable nylon frames and interchangeable polycarbonate lenses. The stylish lenses offer 100 percent protection from ultra violet rays and the glasses' wrap design provides peripheral protection from dust and the sun.

In addition, dads who love being outside may enjoy a gift that brings them closer to the great outdoors—binoculars. Bushnell Xtra-Wide® binoculars feature state-of-the-art technology that provide a field of view nearly twice as wide as conventional binoculars.

Dads who enjoy sports may like gifts that help them play as hard as they work.

• Help Dad make a splash. Dads who are water sport enthusiasts may enjoy Serengeti® H2Optix® Marine Vision System. The glasses' lenses are engineered to protect against extreme marine conditions and offer virtually 100 percent ultra violet protection. The glasses also provide maximum polarization to help eliminate intense sun glare off the water (this lets wearers more easily see below the water surface). The frames are light-weight, durable and come with a floatable strap.

• Light up the night. Dads who like to camp, hike, boat or do any other activity that may last into the night, might enjoy a night vision scope. High-tech Generation I Night Vision Scopes are made with image tubes and optics that intensify existing light to let users see in conditions ordinarily too dark for sight.
