

Fly To The South Of France By Train

(NAPSA)—When your train moves at almost 200 miles per hour you can do a lot more on vacations and business trips than ever before. That's the way it is now in Europe on the new high-speed rail network of Premier trains.

A new high-speed rail network cuts travel time from Paris to Provence almost in half.

And this June a great leap forward comes when France's new TGV Méditerranée begins rolling at 186 miles per hour to the south of France cutting current travel time almost in half.

What used to take 4 hours 20 minutes now puts Marseille only 3 hours away from the French capital. The TGV Med is an extension of Europe's first high-speed line—Paris-Lyon in 2 hours. Now it also helps travelers headed for Avignon, Aix-en-Provence and many other historic French cities, including Nice and Nîmes. Heading north from Provence, you can travel to Charles de Gaulle airport and many other places.

Time savings from Paris on the new TGV Med line are 1 hour 20 minutes to Marseille, 2 hours 45 minutes to Aix, eliminating the need to fly and getting to and from airports. Reservations are mandatory on all the TGV trains.
