Extreme Skiing Video Game

(NAPSA)—This winter, Olympic gold medalist Jonny Moseley, along with fellow freestyle skiers Tanner Hall, Evan Raps and Vincent Dorion, are the stars of the very first video game that captures the thrill of freestyle skiing. The game, “Jonny Moseley Mad Trix,” for the PlayStation 2, attempts to capture this revolutionary sport.

A new video game goes to extremes, based on the tricks of championship freestyle skiers.

Working with The 3DO Company, Moseley was an active participant in the creation of the game. In addition to working with the design team to make sure the game accurately captured the sport, he also put on a black, skin-tight outfit covered with small reflective balls so that his trademark tricks could be “motion-captured.”

Jonny Moseley Mad Trix is available for the PlayStation 2 computer entertainment system and for the Game Boy Advance. More information can be found at www.3do.com/madtrix.
