

FAMILY FUN

Racing Is Back On The Table

(NAPSA)—A little imagination can turn a day at home into a fun time for the whole family. Here are hints on how:

• I've Got the World on a String. Make a puppet show stage out of old cardboard boxes—or even buy one—and have the kids help make puppets out of old socks or popsicle sticks.

• Sunday Not in the Park. An indoor picnic can be a fun way to pass the time. Pack a basket of goodies, spread a blanket out on the floor and pretend you're in the woods.

• That's the Way the Cookie Crumbles. When you're stuck inside, it can be cozy to bake and decorate cookies with your kids. Make multicolored frosting using a few drops of food coloring mixed with plain white icing. Don't forget to supply them with plenty of sprinkles.

• Create Your Own Space. Have the kids build a fort, design a moon base or build a tent with just their imaginations—and sofa cushions, old boxes, blankets, sheets or other things you find around the house.

• A Day at the Races. Micro-sized remote control racing isn't just for kids. It's increasingly popular even with business types as a way to relax and it's something the whole family can do. What's more, you can still get the kitchen table cleared off in time for dinner.

The newest twist in this hot trend is from RadioShack, who is Six frequencies let you triple the excitement by racing up to six miniature racers at once.

introducing ZipZaps SE (Special Edition), the next generation of micro RCs featuring the latest innovations in ZipZaps technology, including six-person racing, headlights and taillights for nighttime racing and digital-proportional steering for precision maneuverability. Not to mention the customizable body tops licensed from today's hottest car makers, including Audi, Mercedes, Mazda and the Ford Mustang.

These miniature remote control cars are sure to be a hit with anyone young or old: the cruiser, the speedster, the collector or the gadget guru. The originality, high hip quotient, and reasonable price makes these racers a great gift.

ZipZap and ZipZap SE micro RCs are available exclusively at RadioShack stores and at www.radioshack.com.