Alien Life-Forms

(NAPSA)—In the biggest alien sighting since Roswell in the 1940s, extraterrestrials are landing in stores throughout the U.S., just in time for the holidays.

In a fun and bizarre bit of “edutainment,” kids now have the opportunity to grow, nurture and interact with their own collectible race of aliens. And they can choose between good and evil creatures—but both depend on their keepers to survive.

A new kind of alien race is growing in homes across the U.S.

Test Tube Aliens are interactive toys that have children nurturing and caring for their very own aliens and learning life skills. Kids need to feed them the right amounts of water and alien “sloog” for the aliens to grow and thrive. The creatures evolve in their test tube homes to six-inch-tall aliens within a few weeks. Caregivers can also place their aliens in front of a computer for regular health checks.

Test Tube Aliens have been awarded The National Parenting Center’s 2007 Seal of Approval. They are available at toy stores and online retailers or by visiting www.testtubealiens.com.
