Golfers Are Getting In The Swing Of Walking

(NAPSA)—Many recreational golfers still prefer walking a course to riding. Not only is it part of the game's tradition, but the exercise benefits of walking are immeasurable.

A new product based on innovative “push cart” technology may change the way golfers transport their bags on the course.

Many golfers dislike carrying their bag or using a pull cart, as these methods are not ergonomically correct, strenuous and can lead to muscle strains.

Now, a new product based on innovative “push cart” technology may change all that. The Bag Boy Company, a world leader in golf bag and cart technology, offers a full-line of push carts that are ergonomically correct and said to be both easy to use and exercise friendly.

To further promote push cart walking, the company is giving away 12 of its signature EZ Fold 12 carts to lucky winners who participate in the company's walking survey at www.bagboycompany.com.
