

The Latest In Published Government Information

With customers across the nation and worldwide, the U.S. Government Printing Office's Superintendent of Documents sales program serves people who need the latest in published information from agencies of the U.S. government.

The Superintendent of Documents sales program is the public's easy-access route to official versions of: authoritative military history and defense analyses; laws, regulations and guidelines; domestic and international demographic, productivity, agriculture and trade statistics; economic indicators; medical research reports; safety standards; copyright, trademark and patent procedures; immigration forms; select Congressional hearing reports; court decisions; National Park Service guidebooks; navigation; scientific and technical information; training materials for pilots, emergency medical technicians and other professionals; consumer resources related to health, nutrition and education; and much more.

Visitors to the U.S. Government Online Bookstore Web site can find a complete, searchable sales product catalog; announcements of new and newsworthy titles; locations of U.S. government bookstores, and a subscription catalog.

To order government information products online:

Web site: <http://bookstore.gpo.gov>

Or call toll-free (866) 512-1800 for a free catalog.