All-In-One Solution For Killing Lawn Weeds

(NAPSA)—For homeowners who want lush, beautiful lawns, weeds can be a major source of frustration. Striving for the beautiful yards they want, more and more Americans are relying on lawn weed killers for protection.

For many, the biggest puzzle has always been identifying different types of weeds and which products will kill them. Most of them fall into two categories: broadleaf weeds, such as dandelions and clovers; and grassy-type weeds, such as crabgrass and nutsedge.

In the past, a major problem has been that most lawn weed killers were limited in the kinds of weeds they could kill. Some control broadleaf weeds, but not the grassy weeds. Or you might buy a separate crabgrass killer only to find it won't knock out the dandelions. So homeowners have had to identify their specific weeds—a difficult task for most—before making a weed killer purchase.

Some experts believe that dilemma has been solved with the introduction of Bayer Advanced Lawn All-In-One Weed Killer for Lawns, which kills both broadleaf and grassy weeds in one easy-to-use product. This product makes it simple to control more than 200 lawn weeds, including dandelions and crabgrass, in a single step.

Perhaps best of all, when used as directed, the product will not harm a lawn. Plus, its all-in-one, ready-to-use formulation contains a non-staining visual marker that highlights weeds as they're sprayed so you can be sure of which areas you've covered. That alleviates any need to spray twice.

"This product is super because it takes out the guesswork," said Lance Walheim, a horticulturist who wrote the books Roses for Dummies and Lawn Care for Dummies. "Not only does it kill broadleaf weeds and grassy weeds in one application, but it also eradicates a large number of them."
