More Companies Are Delivering Convenience

(NAPSA)—There's good news for consumers who feel overwhelmed by a schedule that's filled with work, chores and family responsibilities. More businesses are noticing the lack of time in their customers' day and are doing something about it.

Home delivery isn't just for pizza anymore. In recent years, companies have become more creative with what exactly is delivered. Here are a few examples of at-home services designed to add ease and convenience to your day:

Laundry last on your list? Dry-cleaning services will schedule a designated time and place to pick up and drop off clothes at regular intervals or on an as-needed basis. While this service was once limited to deliveries to major offices, service can now be arranged for home deliveries.

Need a hand with mower maintenance? John Deere has announced nationwide implementation of its Service Delivered, Mobile Maintenance program.

This convenient service brings a factory-trained technician right to your doorstep to perform a 14-point inspection, called Ready To Mow, on lawn tractors, walk-behind mowers and outdoor power equipment in a specially designed truck made for door-to-door service. These specialists take care of the dirty work while you enjoy your time outdoors.

Prefer groceries to go? Avoid walking up and down crowded aisles or unloading a trunk full of stuffed paper bags with what little free time you have. Shop for groceries online and schedule a convenient delivery at your doorstep in a day or two.

For more information, visit www.ReadyToMow.com or call a John Deere dealer.
