Helping Mothers in Need

(NAPSA)—This year, a growing number of sons and daughters are celebrating Mother's Day by honoring their moms in a new way.

They're making donations in their mothers' names to charities that assist children and families living in poverty.

A growing number of people are honoring their mother on Mother's Day by making a charitable donation.

For example, through the World Vision gift catalog, it's possible to provide clothing for a homeless child in the U.S. for just $25. Children make up one-fourth of the entire homeless population in the U.S.

Also for only $25, a donor can provide 240 children and mothers in Asia with vitamin A capsules essential to their health. And $40 provides one month's worth of nourishment for a refugee baby.

When a gift is purchased in your mother's name, she'll receive a beautiful card describing how a family has benefited from her caring.
