Kidnapping, World Cultures, Murder, And Explosions—Mysteries Of Four Kinds

"The Tower of Songs" by Casey Barrett (Kensington)

(NAPS)—As P.I. Duck Darley navigates one of his most difficult tasks to date—the road to sobriety—he tested with a complex missing person’s case in New York City. Duck can empathize with sarcastic teen Layla Soto, whose damaged family life is similar to his own. When Layla sees two women abduct her billionaire father, she immediately suspects her status-seeking grandmother.

Duck takes the case and finds himself reunited with Cass Kimball, partner in his previous escapade, which sweetens the deal. The two find themselves involved in a tangled ransom and are swept into a whirlwind of chaos with New York’s most dangerous drug criminals. Purchase at https://amzn.to/2kGAzry.

"The Perfect Culture" by Brent Robins (Cicero Publishing LLC)

Rich with witty satire and introspective reflection, protagonist Thomas Gephardt teaches readers what it’s like to visit all walks of life through his eyes. Thomas becomes less motivated to leave his comfortable life and career, and several ghosts of Peter’s past return to haunt him in his desperate attempts to prove his innocence.

All that’s certain is Charlie Doyle’s death is much darker and more malevolent than anyone could have predicted. Purchase at https://amzn.to/2kJhbKu.

"The Second Law" by L.A. Starks (Park Row)

A San Francisco company refinery is gunned down in front of her. What terrible plan lies behind these crimes? Lynn races to uncover a complex plot that stretches from murder in New Orleans to a natural gas terminal attack in Munich to a major Caribbean oil installation off U.S. shores. And what of a high-stakes takeover bid? Unless Lynn can piece things together, thousands more are scheduled to die. Purchase at https://amzn.to/2kuqFtf.

Kidnapping, world cultures, murder, explosions—four different kinds of mysteries are in exciting new novels available through BookTrib, will keep mystery fans guessing—and glad.

Lead-in copy for online posting

Four exciting new novels will keep mystery fans guessing—and glad. /// Kidnapping, World Cultures, Murder, And Explosions—Mysteries Of Four Kinds

Tweet text copy

Kidnapping, world cultures, murder, explosions—four different kinds of mysteries are in exciting new novels available through BookTrib, will keep mystery fans guessing—and glad.

Tag words

Google Search Ad

Outbrain Native Ad