(NAPS)—These days, Americans of all income levels are looking for good deals. In fact, an estimated 89% of American households earning between $175,000 and $199,999 regularly use digital coupons according to Simply Codes.

What You Can Do

Fortunately, there are steps you can take to make your money go farther:

1. Make sure you're not wasting energy at home. Keep utility bills down and the environment cleaner by checking that you have enough insulation, using LED instead of incandescent bulbs, and getting a smart thermostat that will heat or cool your home so you're comfortable when you're there and saving money when you're not.

2. Use less. A pea-sized amount of toothpaste, a tablespoon of dishwasher powder, a half cup of laundry detergent; that's all of most cleaning products you need.

3. Save on health, wellness and personal care items. All too often, coupons and promotions can be limited and fleeting, but that's a trend Walgreens is intending to break.
